Expo 3 International

Florida, USA

Besides the wares of various companies, on show at tradeshows is the talent of the people who create tradeshow displays.

These companies are hired to make a lasting impression on behalf of trade show exhibitors and be as inconspicuous as possible.

Commtech USA recently provided assistance to one such company, Expo-3 International; installing a MAXPage and alphanumeric pager solution in an effort to provide staff with efficient and discreet communication.

Expo-3 International designs and manufactures striking and creative exhibits for tradeshows, museums and showrooms.

With a belief in creating results-driven environments and not just exhibits, staff for the company often assemble and dismantle their products on behalf of exhibitors.

Locating staff at a trade show, quickly and quietly, was a major concern for Expo-3.
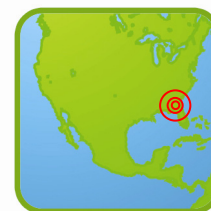

They needed to contact staff at all times, but didn't want to use audible alerts as this would interfere with the exhibition.

With the help of staff at Commtech USA, Expo-3 received a MAXPage solution that incorporated 6120 pagers.

The alphanumeric 6120 pagers not only offer the flexibility of up to 500 characters per message, but their silent alert mode is perfect for the requirements.

Staff can now receive detailed messages in a flash, no matter where they are throughout the trade show site. What's more, the 6120 is so easy to operate that only a moment's training was required.

While impressed with the compact size and ease-of-use of the 6120 pagers and the MAXPage unit, Expo-3 were also enthused by the help they received from Commtech USA staff during the installation process.
